Addressing industry challenges

In 2021, 60% of nursing staff in NHS hospital settings were considering or planning to leave their jobs, according to a Royal College of Nursing survey. One major cause was equipment failing to meet their needs. Nurses walk miles each day, unable to complete charting in the allocated time. 74% work beyond their contract hours, 17% do so every workday.

Typical healthcare settings have a shortage of mobile and wall-mounted workstations. The ones they have are often located too far from patients or too cumbersome to move and position. They may also be prone to technical issues such as long electronic health record (EHR) reboot times.

Benefits for everyone

Providing the right equipment for caregivers to carry out their tasks can significantly increase staff retention and help you attract new recruits. Comfortable ergonomically designed workspaces with improved access to technology can boost workflow efficiencies and productivity, minimise risk of staff injuries and reduce inaccuracies in care.

Ergotron's solutions also help IT teams to keep the fleet up and running, and committees gain a futureproof solution for all the various users and changing workflows.
